

MRI in Breast Cancer

Orhan Nalcioglu, University of California

We will present work done at our institution on the use of MRI in breast cancer. The presentation will start by describing a compartmental model that has been used by us since 1993 in studying tumor vascular function in animal models and humans. The employment of this method for diagnosis, therapy monitoring, and disease prognosis in breast cancer will be presented with examples.