Herbarium of the Komarov Botanical Institute of the Russian Academy of Sciences (LE) in St. Petersburg is one of three the largest Herbarium in the world. In the sector of Central and Eastern Asia of this Herbarium is kept a large collection of plants from the Korean Peninsula, which includes a large number of the type specimens of plants which were described from this region.

An enormous contribution to the study of the flora of Korea belongs to the prominent Russian botanist V.L. Komarov. During 1895-1897, he collected plants in the region of the Russian Far East, Manchuria and Korea, and published a fundamental work (Flora Manshuriae) (Komarov, 1901b-1907), which is still an important work for the floristic studies in the region. Komarov traveled to Korea in 1897 and gathered enormous herbarium specimens, on which he described a considerable number of new species (Komarov, 1901a); his specimens cover one third of type specimens from Korea included in this study.

K.J. Maximowicz, a prominent botanist on the flora of East Asia, also described a considerable number of new species from Korea on the basis of the material collected by A. Schlippenbach, C. Wilford and R. Oldham. Some new species was described by I.V. Palibin. He studied the extensive original collections of A.A. Bunge (son),

N.C. Epow, J. Kalinowsky, A. Sontag and others, and completed a fundamental work on the flora of Korea - (Conspectus Florae Coreanae) (Palibin, 1899-1901).

A considerable number of species were described by A.A.H. Léveillé (some of them with co-author E. Vanier) on the herbarium material of French collectors U. Faurie and E. Taquet from the island of Jeju (Quelpaert); their doublet specimens are kept in the Herbarium LE.

In this article is given the information about the type material of 150 taxa described from Korea. Most of them were found before the work on the cataloging and digitalization of herbarium material from Korea in the framework of the (Joint Research Project Agreement between Komarov Botanical Institute of the Russian Academy of Sciences and National Institute of Biological Resources of the Ministry of Environment, Republic of Korea) (Grubov, 2004). During the Project of 2012-2013, were found authentic material of 48 taxa from Korea. They are marked by (*) in the text before number of the taxa list.

The list of type specimens begins with conifers and then is alphabetically ordered for the names of families, genera and species. Labels are given in original transcription, but Komarov's Russian labels were translated in Latin.
